Jennifer Cohen's practice focuses primarily on employment law and business litigation. Jennifer is a results-driven attorney with a depth of experience gained from serving as both in-house counsel and a private practice attorney. Jennifer was a key player in the success of a publicly traded hospitality and sales company with a large and diverse workforce. She is adept at managing complex employment matters, including wage and hour issues, discrimination claims, EEOC and state agency charges of discrimination, Human Resources complaints and investigations, performance management, leaves of absence (FMLA) management, and restrictive covenants such as non-competes and non-solicits.

Jennifer is highly skilled at drafting employment documents such as handbooks, restrictive covenant agreements, severance agreements, and employment agreements. She has unique experience handling employment matters within the context of corporate transactions, including due diligence and WARN Act compliance. One of Jennifer's many strengths is her ability to provide practical, easy-to-understand advice in a timely manner so her clients can make the best business decisions while ensuring that they remain compliant with applicable laws. Jennifer is a trusted advisor who can support the needs of the business at any level of the organization.
